FOREWORD

A note of grateful appreciation: To all my uncles, aunts, and cousins who have helped make this book possible, especially to Mrs. George Fairlamb Beale, Wilson W. Mills, DeCoursey Fales, Elizabeth Fairlamb Beale, deceased, and to my Quaker forebears who kept such good records. Also for the interest and inspiration given to me by my sister, Virginia Beale Conrad and my friend, Mrs. Frances Beal Smith Hodges.

A Visit to the Old Home Place

There's nothing left to mark the grounds
Where once a family grew.
There's nothing left but grassy mounds,
And nobody's left of those we knew.

Strangers stride where Baby crept
Who never heard our names.
Strangers sleep where once we slept
And dreamed our childish dreams.

The grown-up birds have flown the nest
To make their homes so far away.
The old folks have gone to their rest,
The children, on their headlong way.
